BRIDGING CULTURES:

The Language Ladies Return to Mal Pas for exclusive Spanish Course

Learning a language is far more than memorising vocabulary lists and conjugating verbs in a classroom. It is about connection, culture, and community. This September, Julia Dean, the founder of the Cornwall-based language agency The Language Ladies, is returning to her teenage roots to host an exclusive Intermediate Spanish Course in the coastal hamlet of Mal Pas, Alcúdia.

Now in its third consecutive year, the course has become a highly anticipated fixture on the local educational calendar. It takes place at the historic Casa Teresa, a striking and beautiful property that serves as the perfect backdrop for immersive learning.

A Personal Connection to Mal Pas

For Julia, this course is much more than a business venture; it is a homecoming. She first moved to live in Bonaire, Mal Pas with her parents when she was just 17 years old, forming a lifelong bond with the island's northern coast.

"I remember walking past Casa Teresa on my way to the beach all those years ago," Julia recalls fondly. "Although there are certainly more houses now, the area remains wonderfully unspoilt, peaceful, and incredibly special. Bringing students back to this exact location feels like completing a circle."

While The Language Ladies is officially headquartered amidst the rugged coastline of Cornwall, UK, Julia's heart has always remained partly in Mallorca. This unique blend of British local agency care and authentic Mallorcan lifestyle knowledge is what sets her courses apart.

Opening Doors to Local Residents

In previous years, the course catered primarily to international students who flew out from England, enjoying a sun-soaked educational holiday while staying at the neighbouring Prinsotel. However, 2026 marks an exciting evolution for the programme. This year, Julia is officially opening the course to local Mallorcan residents who are at an intermediate level and looking to polish their language skills.

The course is from Thursday 17th September to Tuesday 22nd September.

By mixing international visitors with local residents, the course aims to create a vibrant cultural exchange. To maintain the high quality of instruction and the intimate atmosphere that The Language Ladies are famous for, places are strictly limited. The goal is to keep the group small, friendly, and deeply supportive, ensuring no student is left behind and everyone gets ample talking time.

Real-World Spanish for Practical Living

The curriculum is designed around the concept of mastering real-world conversations. Rather than focusing on dry, textbook grammar drills, the daily sessions are packed with interactive role-plays, lively debates, and practical activities.

The syllabus covers essential everyday scenarios designed to boost confidence immediately. Students will practice surviving the bustling local markets, ordering with confidence in traditional restaurants, navigating food and clothes shopping, and handling visits to the doctor.

Crucially, the course also dives into Mallorca's rich local history, allowing students to truly understand the culture of the island they are standing on.

Julia remains highly flexible, adapting the course day by day to pivot toward the specific needs, questions, and goals of the individual students in the room.

Mark Your Calendar

The intensive course is structured to offer the perfect balance of study and leisure:

- Welcome Drinks: Wednesday evening, 16th September, hosted by Julia at Casa Teresa to break the ice.
- Course Dates: Thursday 17th September to Tuesday 22nd September.
- Daily Schedule: Morning sessions run from 10:30am to 12:45pm, leaving afternoons free.
- Rest Day: Sunday is a completely free day, allowing international students to explore the wider island and locals to relax.

Whether you are an expat living in Mallorca who wants to finally feel confident chatting with neighbours, or a visitor looking for a purposeful holiday, this course offers an unmatched opportunity to learn Spanish where it is actually spoken.

For more information about the course, availability, and how to secure one of the limited spots, visit https://thelanguageladies.co.uk or contact Julia Dean directly to assess your language level.

